Hello Keith,

I don't think that Madison is too small to benefit from a pilot project. I would suggest that the pilot be undertaken in a way that officers assigned to various parts of the City are part of the project.

We are working on finalizing the work of our Body-Worn Committee's work, and one question has come up that I would value some input from you on. The City is considering a pilot project, and I believe you have said in the past that pilot projects on BWCs can be useful. A suggestion has been made here, however, that a pilot project here might be too small to provide useful information, given the size of our department. Do you have a reaction to this? Thanks.
