

A sign on the mailbox states that this is a natural yard. A decorative fence and small sculpture show that this yard is being maintained.

The only part of the yard that is visible from the public area. Flowers in planters, a birdbath, and a place to sit show that this yard is being maintained.

The prairie is beginning its second summer. It should look much better soon.

The rain garden, swale, and pond system.

The path through the backyard woodland. The spring ephemerals here are establishing well.

The yard serves as an extension of a nearby woodland, which is connected to the yard via a line of trees and very tall shrubs in the adjoining neighbors' yards, and which directly abuts the adjoining neighbors' yards.
