Body

DRAFTER'S ANALYSIS: Wis. Stat. § 62.23(7)(i) provides that community living arrangements and adult family homes may locate in residential zones without obtaining special permission from the City. The zoning code currently requires conditional use permits in certain zones where it is not allowed to require special permission. This amendment ensures that city ordinances are consistent with state law. For example, adult family homes and community living arrangements serving up to 8 residents are permitted uses in any residential zone. Community living arrangements serving 9-15 residents are permitted uses in any residential zone except those exclusively zoned for single-family or 2-family residences, where state law allows the city to require conditional use approval. For community living arrangements serving more than 15 residents, state law allows the city to require conditional use approval. Accordingly, the code does not need to be amended for these establishments. This amendment also amends the supplemental regulations to reflect these changes.
