Members and staff of the Transportation Commission,

According to the city's Complete Green Streets policy, Pflaum Road is on the All-Ages-and-Abilities bike network, that is, a street where policy is "to prioritize high-comfort bikeways." However, the city is proposing to add a "door zone," unprotected bike lane, squeezed in between car parking on one side and car traffic on the other.

As a 78-year-old senior who biked almost 7,000 miles last year I do not want to see biking made less safe than what was initially proposed. Please do not approve the "door zone" in an area already designated as "high comfort" for biking.

Given the Trump administration's reckless and irresponsible attempts to destroy our climate, Madison must do everything it can with an eye toward encouraging biking, not motor vehicles.

Sincerely,
Richard D. Smith
