Local artists and creatives added artwork to Madison's boarded up windows throughout the day Tuesday. After three nights of protests against police violence, many businesses in the State Street area have boarded up their windows due to damage or anticipated damage.

According to a post from Isthmus, some of the art was organized by city arts administrator Karin Wolf, who helped connect artists and business owners. Other art was created by individual business' employees.

While there is some information in the gallery above, below find posts from some of the artists themselves.
