

What the City of Madison should do about home healthcare crisis

Facilitate the number of caregivers available to work with disabled Madisonians by:

1. Contacting UW, Madison College and Edgewood to offer credit for such work to their students.
2. Contacting immigrant communities who might benefit from this work
3. Creating PR among the neighborhood organizations to make known that such positions are available
4. Offering bus passes to those people who do this work, since many don't have cars
5. Offering childcare to those who do this work, since many have children
6. Lobbying the State of Wisconsin to increase the funding for such positions
7. Increase awareness of the caregiver crisis and the growing importance of caregivers in the lives of Madisonians
8. Creating a working group to report on these matters in six months.
