I'm writing due to the article in today's WSJ about the "potential impacts of sunshine glaring off the building's glass." In the latest Living Bird magazine edited by Cornell Lab of Ornithology, there is an article on bird-friendly stadiums. How exciting to read that the Bucks new home stadium is the first-ever certified bird-friendly professional sports arena. How exciting it would be if this new building on E. Wash could not only be non-glare, but be bird-friendly! Thanks for your consideration. Delores Haak
