My husband I thought we'd put our 2 cents in about the 100 State situation. How about just have a wonderful mural painted on the backside of the buildings in question--maybe like the one obscured under the Monona Terrace?

We visited Bayfield or Ashland, WI this fall and one of those towns celebrates murals on decrepit buildings and makes something wonderful out of them. They use local artists, depicting local scenes or events, and actually have a tour of them--I think they number 10 or 12. This way you wouldn't have to take down the back of the buildings to erect a useless private restaurant/park. There are already a ton of great restaurants downtown.
