Good morning, Katherine!

Thank you for your email. Your comments will be shared with both the Urban Design Commission, as well as the Plan Commission. Please note that the Plan Commission will be taking this item up this evening, at their November 4 meeting. A link to that meeting agenda is provided below, which also includes information on how to access the virtual meeting.

Good afternoon. Ms. Vaughn.

I understand that this comment is after the October 23rd meeting, but unfortunately I was out of the country and unable to attend.

I wish to express my extreme opposition to this development for many reasons. The two most pressing are:

1. The number of units and, by extension, the number of new residents is too high for the given area. It is a small, residential area, and I do not understand the calculus that makes it possible to go from 4 single family homes (sometimes occupied, sometimes vacant) and one vacant business to 76 housing units. Even when the business was operating the level of traffic and noise was not anywhere near the level that this many new residents would bring. (And to counter any arguments about the developments across the street, that was a very large vacant area with train tracks and businesses bordering it as well as an outlet for traffic) Again, this is a small residential area with a church and an elementary school within 2 blocks of the proposed development.

2. Seventh Street is not physically equipped to handle the influx of 100+ new residents and the accompanying traffic. As stated above, there is an elementary school and a church within two blocks of the development, and especially during the pickup/dropoff hours at the school, it can barely handle the traffic flow as it is. This would also prevent the Greek church from holding their annual Greek Fest because they close down Seventh street between East Washington and Mifflin streets. It is the longest running ethnic festival in Madison and well liked and anticipated by the neighborhood every year.

When many neighbors asked at the initial informational meeting about the development why the driveway could not be put on East Washington, we were told it was "not possible". This is ludicrous since every building on East Washington has a driveway on the main road. In order to head East, drivers will have to turn on to the overly burdened Seventh, Mifflin and Dayton streets and go blocks out of the way. If it is "not possible" to have the driveway on East Washington, it is simply "not possible" to have such a large development at that spot.

I understand Madison needs more affordable housing, and I would not be opposed to a much smaller, appropriately sized development, but more thought needs to go into these plans. Why has nothing been done in the Oscar Meyer area that has been vacant for a decade?
