All...

This afternoon, Monday February 10, 2014, I stopped by the soon to open "Hong Kong Station" to observe the work they are doing the premise in preparation for their new restaurant. They will be closing nightly at 9p.m. They are only going to sell bottled or can beer to customers who are dining within the establishment. It appears they will only have four or five tables at most in their dining area. Very small space, but they are doing a very nice job re-modeling the interior. They hope to open sometime in early March.

No problems with this particular application.
