When the Common Council approved the 2016 Sanitary Sewer Rate Charges, they directed the Sewer Utility to examine:

"whether a 'progressive' residential rate structure that will incrementally charge higher rates for greater users of the service (i.e. the charge for volume) could be implemented in 2017 and whether such a rate structure would be reasonable and not unjustly discriminatory."

The City Engineer hired a consultant specializing in this area – Raftelis Financial Consultants, Inc. of Kansas City. The study has concluded and Thomas Beckley, Senior Manager with Raftelis will present the findings and recommendations of the study, along with staff from City Engineering. The study results are being presented, in conjunction with the proposed 2017 Sanitary Sewer Rate Charges.
