                  Rebuilding Stronger Than Before: Food Assessment Study Proposal submitted to the County Executive
                  • Requests $100,000 in American Rescue Plan Act funding for an urgently needed, time-sensitive study to assess the strengths, weaknesses, gaps, and opportunities in Dane County's food system and supply chain revealed by COVID-19 pandemic disruptions.
                  o Gather community input from all food system sectors (including farmers, processors, distributors, retailers, restaurants, caterers, senior meal providers, emergency food outlets) about the effects of the pandemic on the Dane County food system.
                  o Identify opportunities to increase the functionality of local supply chains, improve food access, help the community recover from the pandemic, and prepare for any future emergency conditions.

- In line with President Biden's Executive Order on America's Supply Chains: "[t]he United States needs resilient, diverse, and secure supply chains to ensure our economic prosperity and national security"; specifically calls for an examination of food supply chains.

- Study findings will inform Dane County food systems policy and planning decisions and actions.

COVID-19 cases continue to hold steady. UW-Madison is reducing quantity of on-campus testing as the semester winds down. Vaccination rates in Dane County are the highest in the state with over 60% of people having received at least one dose at this time. Unfortunately, vaccination demand has declined significantly in recent weeks. In response to fewer changes in the public health arena, the Dane Food Access Network is moving calls to twice-monthly.
