I object to changing the zoning from four stories to ten stories on the Braden lot. It is vital to maintain the four-story limit in the First Settlement historic district. Changing it will set a precedent where the zoning regulations throughout the historic district no longer mean anything for any future project. In addition ten stories along East Main would cut off all afternoon sunlight to many houses within the District. Not to mention that developers have publicly stated that ten stories would make it harder to increase low income housing in such a building.
