Good morning Lindsay,

In overall appearance, I'm not seeing the difference. Still seeing 3 to 4 stories, style has not changed. Are we still looking at over 200 units plus the townhouses? Maybe I don't understand the overall purpose of the Urban Design Commission. What group makes the decision in regards to the size, looks and fit into neighborhoods? Do the plans normally stay close to original design and the Plan Commission either approves or disapproves? What group tells the developer to scale it down?

This is really disappointing. We can do so much better with the Milwaukee St extension to continue what we have now. For that size, I think the plan better serves to be in a different location like over by the new fire station on the other side of Sprecher where there is already large scale apartments.

Thanks,

Cheryl Solaris
