Honoring the Marquette-Williamson Neighborhood and Marquette Neighborhood Association as a 2013 Great Places in America by the American Planning Association

PREAMBLE

Located on Madison’s Isthmus between Lake Mendota and Lake Monona, the Marquette Neighborhood, whose settlement began in 1857, is one of Madison’s oldest neighborhoods.

During the 1960s and 1970s classic symptoms of central city deterioration and the urban renewal mindset that was characteristic of the time threatened Marquette’s assets. Middle class flight, absentee ownership, demolition, commuter traffic, school closure, and even a freeway proposed to run through the East Rail Corridor were among the challenges facing the residents, but they took a stand.

In 1968, residents formed the Marquette Neighborhood Association (MNA). After their formation, MNA championed efforts to garner input from residents, the business community and major stakeholders to better understand the values of the community. The plan that resulted from this effort guides the private and public sector to preserve, restore, and improve the Marquette Neighborhood to this day. Marquette’s efforts were far ahead of national trends and helped shape a new era of place-based planning.

Today, 45 years later, Marquette’s renaissance is evident in the locally owned shops, restaurants and live music venues that occupy previously vacant spaces on Williamson Street. Former factories now house startup incubators signaling a post-industrial rebirth of imagination and creativity, and a home-grown entrepreneurial energy prevails. Local art installations, music festivals, Little Free Libraries, express the spirit of an engaged community and the authentic, organic character that results from connection and tenure.

Carfree living is not only possible, but it is an attractive option in Marquette with its rich network of detached sidewalks, bike trails, transit routes and grid of streets that connect residents to the many neighborhood amenities.

On October 4, 2013 the American Planning Association (APA) recognized Williamson-Marquette Neighborhood as one of 10 Great Places in America because of its spirit of resident engagement and cooperation, preservation and protection of its historic, natural, and social resources, and its partnership with the public, nonprofit, and private sectors to accomplish its long-term goals.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the City of Madison congratulates the Marquette Neighborhood and Marquette Neighborhood Association as a recipient of the national APA's Great Places in America: Neighborhoods Award and its ongoing thoughtful and deliberate planning by residents, community leaders and planners.
